INDEX

TO THE

HUNDRED AND EIGHTEENTH VOLUME

OF THE North American Review.

Alexander, Mrs., her Wooing O't, and Which shall it be? critical notice of, 442 - 444.

Antiquity of the North American Indians, 70 - 87.

Architecture, Modern, Examples of, critical notice of, 208.

Arctic Exploration, article on, 23 - 69 — Dr. Hayes's plan, 25 — crude geographical notions prevalent in Middle Ages, 26 — Ruysch's map, 27 — motive of explorations, 28 - 47 — Pope Nicholas IV. forbids trafficking with the heathen, — effect of his bull, 28, 29 — Pulci's poem predicting a Western world, 30 — Peter Martyn's In Janum, 31 — the Pope gives the Spaniards all newly discovered lands west of longitude of Cape Verde Islands. Portuguese all east, 32 — voyages and discoveries of John and Sebastian Cabot, 32 — Francis I. of France sends Verazzano to find northern Magellan Strait, 33 — discovery of Newfoundland, 34 — of Gulf of St. Lawrence, 34 — the Muscovy Company, and discoveries made under its auspices, 35 - 38 — Willoughby, Chancellor, and Adams's expeditions to north of Europe, 37 — Frobisher's voyages to North America, 38 - 42 — Davis's Arctic expeditions, 42 - 44 — Dutch expedition to Nova Zembla and eastward, 44 - 46 — Spaniards trace western coast of America, 46 — Juan de Fuca, 47 — Behring's discoveries, 48 — Capt. Cook, Vancouver, Kotzebue, 49 — fifty-five expeditions explored north coast of Asia, 50 — development of north coast of America, 51 — Hudson's expedition to Greenland, Spitzbergen, and Nova Zembla in 1608, 53 — Parry's expedition to Spitzbergen, 55 — Hudson discovers Hudson's Bay in 1610, 56 — Baffin's explorations, 57 — Parry's Arctic discoveries, 59, 60 — Franklin's famous expedition and the search for him, 61 - 63 — Dr. Kane's expedition in 1853, 64 — Dr. Hayes's in 1860, 65 — Hall's in 1869, 66 - 69

Bagehot on the English Constitution, 1 - 23.

Baxmann, Rudolf, his Die Politik der Päpste von Gregor I. bis Gregor VII., critical notice of, 398 - 401.

Beardsley, E. Edwards, his Life and Correspondence of Samuel Johnson, D. D., critical notice of, 451 - 456.

Canada, The Ancien Régime in, article on, 225 - 255 — feudalism planted in Canada by Richelieu, 226 — nature of the faith and homage required of the owners of fiefs to seigniors, 227 — of seigniors to the crown, 228 — difference between the position of Canadian seignior and that of a vassal proprietor of Middle Ages, 228 — payments required of Canadian habitans, 229 - 231 — tenure of land, 231 — French gentilshommes in Canada, their enforced idleness, destitution, and adventures, 232 - 238 — French king's relief, 236 — fur-traders and discoverers, 237 — relative duties and powers of the governor-general and the intendant, 239, 240 — the Superior Council, 241 — instruments and administration of justice, 242 - 244 — the Superior Council in session, 244 — difficulties under which the intendants labored, 246 - 248 — wide scope of their power, 248 — their absolutism, 249 - 252 — suppression of public meetings, 250 — punishment for speaking ill of royalty, 250 — for profanity, 251 — small pay of officers, 252 — entire administration centred in the king, 253 — his policy shaped by Madame de Maintenon, 254.

Colling, James R., his Art Foliage, critical notice of, 207, 208.

Constitutions, The, of Great Britain and the United States, article on, 1 - 23 — proper basis of comparison between constitutions of Great Britain and United States, 3 — great parliamentary reforms carried in Great Britain since 1815, 4 - 6 — far less satisfactory record of the United States, 6 - 10 — evils of the civil service, 7 — state of tariff, currency, 9 — special legislation, 10 — Mr. Bagehot's book on the English Constitution, 10–23 — functions of the cabinet, 11 — advantages of it, 12 — lack of true public discussion and responsibility in a presidential government, 12, 13 — no chance for effective opposition to a party majority, 14 — judiciousness of giving Cabinet ministers a part in Congressional debates, 17, — relative advantages of British and American modes of forming a Cabinet and determining its tenure of office, 17–20 — reasons why there is not a strong and enlightened public opinion in America, 20–22 — why American papers are not so good as English, 21 — parliamentary government superior in efficient administration to bureaucratic despotism, 22 — the government of India, 22.

Cooke, Josiah P., Jr., his The New Chemistry, critical notice of, 425–427.

Currency, The, and Finances of the United States, article on, 88–140 — history of first United States Bank, 89 — second, 90 — evils and absurdities attending and following the expiration of its charter, 90–92 — creation of the Independent Treasury, 93 — Mr. Chase's ambition as Secretary of Treasury, 94 — he exhausts the coin of the banks, 95 — some simple and incontestable statements about metallic currency and substitutes for it, 96–110 — substitutes, for convenience, bills of exchange, 99 — natural origin of banks and their bills, 100 — how these become currency, 101 — how banks facilitate use of capital, 103 — why they may safely issue notes in excess of their actual capital, 104 — essential quality of all currencies, their convertibility into coin, 105 — banks should make short loans, 107 — tampering with the currency one of the gravest offences, 108 — government has no function for creating and managing a currency, 109 — a community left free will provide its own currency, 109 — Mr. Chase's financial system, 110–115 — his folly in demanding coin on his loans, 110 — his urgency, when Secretary of Treasury, to have U. S. notes legal tender, 110, 111 — when chief justice, declared the legal-tender acts unconstitutional, 111, 112 — speculation produced by paper money, 113 — Chase's ignorance of monetary science, 114 — the national banks a monopoly, 114, 115 — absence of any adequate provision for redemption, a fatal defect in our currency, 117 — with specie basis, there is a double currency, 117 — what value is given to U. S. notes by declaring them legal tender, 118 — can never be brought to par unless they can be exchanged freely for gold, 119 — Senator Sherman's "magical" plan for bringing them to par, 120–122 — Secretary Boutwell's "absorption" plan, 122–124 — Senator Sumner's "squeezing" plan, 124—England's experience in getting rid of "clipped" coin, related by Macaulay, 125–131 — inconvertibility of a "credit" currency, 133 — what constitutes a "flexible" currency, 133 — suicidal nature of a 'currency of debt," 134 — gold and debt antipodal, 135 — great curse of our legal-tender notes, the uncertainty as to their value, 135 — French coin currency, 138 — English and German, 139.

De Coulanges, Fustel, his The Ancient City, translated by Willard Small, critical notice of, 390–397.

Delocke, Maximin, his La Trustis et l'Antrustion royal sous les deux premières races, critical notice of, 460–464.

Drake, Samuel A., his Historic Fields and Mansions of Middlesex, critical notice of, 188.

Drummond, R. B., his Erasmus, critical notice of, 222.

Finances and Currency of United States, 88–140.

Freeman, Edward A., his History of the Norman Conquest, critical notice of, 176–181.

Gautier, Leon, his La Chanson de Roland, critical notice of, 194–200.

Hadley, James, his Introduction to Roman Law, critical notice of, 214–219.

Hoppin, Augustus, his Hay Fever, critical notice of, 223.

Howells, W. D., his Poems, critical notice of, 190.

Indians, North American, Antiquity of the, article on, 70–87 — proofs of great antiquity of human race in Europe, 70–72 — discovery of flint implements near Abbeville, in France, 70 — in England, 70 — in Picardy and Dordogne, 71 — the peat-bogs of Denmark, 71, 72 — age of Swiss lake dwellings, 72 — Antiquity of North American Indians, 72–87 — no bronze implements found, 73 — mastodon found in Missouri by Dr. Koch, with stone weapons, 73 — megatherium in Georgia, 74 — tradition of Indians respecting mammoth, 75 — fossil human remains found in Florida, 76 — bones of extinct species of animals found near Natchez, 76 — skeletons, stone implements, etc., found near Shreveport, 77 — buried forests found near New Orleans, 78 — flint implements found in Nacoochee Valley, Georgia, 78 — vast refuse piles found along sea-coast and inland streams, 79 — tumuli, 80–86 — their great simplicity and permanence, 81 — Indian testimony concerning them not wholly trustworthy, 82 — large number of skeletons found in some of them, 83–86 — reasonably certain that the primitive peoples of Mississippi Valley were coeval with mammoth and mastodon, 87.

Kent's Commentaries on American Law, edited by O. W. Holmes, Jr., critical notice of, 383–389.

LaMarmora's Revelations on the War of 1866, article on, 152 - 175 — Prussia aggrandized in 1866 by purely dynastic policy, Germany saved in 1870 by national policy, 152 — Prussian rulers for nearly two centuries pursued a self-seeking policy, destructive to German interests, 153 — Frederick II. offered France all the left bank of Rhine for its alliance against Germany, 154 — the Fürstenbund, 154 — Holy Alliance, 154 — rivalry between Austria and Prussia, 155 — object of royal Prussian policy, to break up German nation, 155 — Bismarck comes on scene, 156 — LaMarmora's disclosures, 157 — diplomacy, begun by Bismarck in 1865, to form alliance with Italy and bring on war with Austria, 158 — articles of proposed treaty, 158 — Bismarck's purpose to form a Northern Germany under lead of Prussia, a Southern under Bavaria, 161, 162 — how France was to be kept neutral and rewarded therefor, 161, 163 - 169 — Louis Napoleon's programme, 164 — extensive cessions Bismarck was willing to make to gain his neutrality, 165 - 167 — no enthusiasm in Prussia for the war of 1866, 166 — how King William disappointed the hopes the Liberals cherished of him, 167 — prophecies made by Karl Blind in 1858, in 1860, and in 1866, 167 - 169 — Bismarck to be a Bonapartist, 168 — he was willing to yield Luxemburg to France, 170 — favored the Sclavonian movement in Austria, as a means of crushing that Empire, 171 — this project opposed by Hungarians, 172 — summary of concessions Bismarck was willing to make, 173 — confirmed by M. de Lavalette's circular after war, 173 — by letters in Journal des Débats, 173 — Bismarck's aim, the disruption of Germany for the sake of enlarging Prussia, and the promotion of absolutism, 174 — Louis Napoleon's plans based thereon thwarted by loyalty of Southern Germany, 174 — how Victor Emanuel was prevented from declaring for France in 1870, 175 — German national spirit in 1870 proved the safeguard of the Fatherland, 175.

Landor, Walter Savage, Cameos selected from Writings of, by E. C. Stedman and T. B. Aldrich, critical notice of, 219 - 221.

Liechtenstein, Princess Marie, her Holland House, critical notice of, 428 - 442.

Longfellow, H. W., his Aftermath, critical notice of, 189.

Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, May 20, 1775, article on, 256 - 293 — first published in Raleigh Register in 1819, 256 — Register's statement of the causes and circumstances of its adoption, 257 - 259 — the resolutions containing it, 258 — certificate of J. McKnitt Alexander, authenticating the claim, 259 — how the claim was regarded by John Adams at first, 260, 261 — later, 279 — scouted as "a very unjustifiable quiz," by Jefferson, 260 — resolution penned by Richard Henry Lee, containing several expressions afterward incorporated in Declaration of Independence, 262 — inquiry by legislature of North Carolina, 262 - 265 — digest of testimony elicited, 263 - 265 — Dr. Hawks's indorsement of it, 265 — discrepancies in the testimony, 266 - 268 — resolutions adopted in Mecklenburg County, May 31, 1775, found by Peter Force, 268 - 271 — proofs that those who testified to the Mecklenburg Declaration had in mind the resolutions really adopted May 31, and not those supposed to have been adopted May 20, 273 - 281 — Colonial Governor Martin's official thunderbolt, Aug. 8, 1775, 275 — his letter of June 30 to Lord Dartmouth, 276, 277 — Capt. Jack's journey to Philadelphia as message bearer from Mecklenburg, 278 — this Declaration not mentioned at Philadelphia in 1776, 280 — could not have escaped publicity if it had been real, 280 — proofs from subsequent acts of prominent North Carolinians said to be conspicuous in framing the Declaration, that no such Declaration was made, 281 - 288 — their repeated implications or protestations of loyalty to Great Britain, 283 - 287 — Test of Loyalty and Patriotism signed 23d August, 1775, by Mecklenburg members of North Carolina Provincial Congress, 284 — loyal resolution adopted 25th August, 285 — opposition of North Carolina to combined resistance to Great Britain, 286 — loyal extracts from address to inhabitants of Great Britain, 287 — how the myth of the Mecklenburg Declaration probably grew, without any dishonest intent, 289 - 292.

Mill, John Stuart, his Autobiography, critical notice of, 185.

Parton, James, his Life of Thomas Jefferson, critical notice of, 405 - 415.

Passavant, J. D., his Raphael of Urbino and his Father Giovanni Santi, critical notice of, 212 - 214.

Pickering, E. C., his Elements of Physical Manipulation, critical notice of, 182 - 185.

Pickering Timothy, The Life of, article on, 357 - 383 — rich and voluminous historical and biographical works to illustrate American Revolution, 358 — Pickering's biographers, 359 — special qualifications of Mr. Upham, 359 - 361 — his intimate personal relations with Col. Pickering, 360 — harsh treatment of loyalists by the patriots, 362 — Benjamin Marston, 363 — abundance of materials for a Life of Pickering, 364 — his youth and early manhood, 364 — elected to Legislature, 365 — raises a regiment, publishes a "Plan of Discipline for a Militia," 366 — goes with his regiment to New York, Dec. 24, 1775, 367 — Washington's Adjutant-General in May, 1777, 367 — member of Board of War, 367 — Quartermaster-General, 368 — suggests a military academy at West Point, 369 — in business at Philadelphia, 369 — goes to Wilkesbarre to live and has rough experience, 370 — Commissioner to Indians, with excellent success, 371 — Postmaster-General, 372 — depreciation of him by Mr. Rives, 372 - 375 — quotations from Hamilton, John Adams, and Washington as reported by Edmund Randolph, 373 — Randolph's causes of dislike, 376 — mystery of Pickering's dismissal from John Adams's Cabinet, 377 — his efficient service as a Cabinet officer, 378 — settles in Massachusetts a private citizen, 378 — elected U. S. Senator, offends part of his constituents, 379 — speech and vote against giving Burr the franking privilege, 380 — triumphantly elected to House of Representatives, 381 — his later years, 381.

Potthast, Augustus, his Regesta Pontificum, critical notice of, 458.

Richter, Gustav. his Annalen der dentschen Geschichte in Mittelalter, critical notice of, 456 - 458.

Roman Church, The New Trials of the, article on, 293 - 325 — three great events of 1870 - 71, 293 — traditions concerning relation between Church and State, 294 - 296 — union of temporal and spiritual authorities originally complete, 294 — cosmopolitanism of Christianity, 295 — outline of history of relations between Church and State, 296 - 303 — officially, Christianity was the state religion of the Empire from Constantine till 1806, 296 — Emperor and Pope originally co-ordinate in separate spheres, 296 — change of relations by changes in territory of Empire, 297 — Otho I. installed and deposed popes, 297 — the Pope a vassal of the Emperor, 298 — relation of mutual subordination, 298 — oscillations of supremacy between popes and emperors, 299 — Gregory VII. crushes opposition, 299 — absolute supremacy of Church proclaimed by Boniface VIII., 299 — struggle between Pope and Emperor not for dogma, but for power, 300 — Reformation stopped the quarrel by widening the breach between them, 301 — Empire ceased to be a Catholic state, 302 — the Curia opposed the bishops rather than the Empire, 302 — three different forms under which the Christian Empire existed, 303 — relations between present German Empire and the Church, 304 - 317 — this Empire entirely unlike any previous German Empire, 304 — changes in the Papacy, 305 — its identification with Jesuitism, 306 — aim of Jesuits, 306 — weaknesses of Papacy, 306 — Protestant sects in Germany, their relations to each other and to the Empire, 307 - 312 — "United Church," and "Protestanten-Verein," 308 — the Old Catholics, and their relation to the state, 312 — origin of quarrel between Empire and Papacy, 314 — laws passed by German Reichstag and Prussian Landtag, 314 - 316 — contumacy of Archbishop of Posen and Bishop of Breslau, 316 — the Swiss movement against papal claims, 318 — attitude of M. Loyson (Father Hyacinthe), 318 — Italian movement, 319 - 321 — Law of the Guarantees, 319 — anti-Catholic movements so far successful, 322 — their fatal lack of union, 322 — how many Catholic churches may there be? 323 — complete separation of Church and State impossible, 324.

Sex in Education, Dr. Clarke's article on, 140 - 152 — great value of the book, 140 — an outline of its argument, 141 — its exaggeration of the evils of over-study, 141 — education indispensable for girls, 143 — value of Dr. Clarke's views on identical co-education, 144 - 146 — evils arising from errors in dress, 147 — from girls going into society too much, 147 — from reading unwholesome or unduly exciting books, 148 — from neglect of exercise, 149 — excellence of German system of caring for girls, 151.

Sketches and Essays from Saturday Review, critical notice of, 401 - 405.

Sohm, R., his La Procedure de Lex Salica, critical notice of, 416 - 425.

Stephen, James Fitzjames, his Liberty, Equality, Fraternity, critical notice of, 444 - 447.

Talbert, B. J., his Gothic Forms, critical notice of, 204 - 207.

Third Republic, The Men of the, critical notice of, 221.

Turgéniew, Iwan, article on, 326 - 356 — his wide and spreading reputation, 326 — characteristics as a writer, 326 - 332 — great care, 326 - distinctness, 327 — preciseness of statement and description, 327 - 329 — wide range of observation and sympathy, 330 — universal sensitiveness, 332 — his stories, 332 - 349 — Russian themes and characters, 332 — "Memoirs of a Sportsman," 333 — "A Russian Hamlet," 334 — "Rudin," 335 "Hélène," 336 - 338 — "Lisa," 338 - 341 — "Smoke," 341 — "Fathers and Sons," 342 - 345 — "Spring Torrents," 345 - 349 — Turgéniew's personality and philosophy, 349 - 356 — morbidly serious, 350 — finds too many fools, 353 — rich and intense imagination, 355 — one of the best romancers, 356.

Verne, Jules, his Works, critical notice of, 192.

Warren, Edward, his Life of Joseph Warren, critical notice of, 200 - 204.

White, John Williams, his edition of the Œdipus Tyrannus of Sophocles, critical notice of, 448 - 450.